Poetical.

"CHINESE CHEAP LABOR."

Reproduced by Bret Harte's beautiful poem on the childlike simplicity of "Truthful James." While the story of the Heathen Chinese is familiar to all recent developments will rendar a reperusal of it in this time of peculiar interest.

Which I wish to remark,
And my language is plain,
That for ways are dark
And for tricks that are vain
The heathen Chinese is peculiar;
Which the same I would rise to explain.

Ah Sin was his name
And I shall not deny
In regard to that same
What that name might imply;
But his smile was pensive and child like,
As I frequently remarked to Bill Nye.

It was August the third,
And quite soft were the skies;
Which it might be inferred
That Ah Sin was likewise;
Yet he played in that day upon Wil liam
And me in a way I despise.

Which we had a small game,
And Ah Sin took a hand;
It was vicious. The same
He did not understand;
But he smiled as he sat at the table
With the smile that was childlike and bland.

Yet the cards they were stocked
In a way that I grieve,
And my feelings were shocked
At the state of Nye's sleeve,
Which was stuffed full of aces and bowers,
And the same with intent to deceive.

But the hands that were played
By that heathen Chinee
And the points that he made
Were quite frightful to see;
Till at last he put down a right bower,
Which the same Nye had dealt unto me.

Then I looked up at Nye,
And he gazed at me;
And he rose with a sigh
And he said, "Can this be?
We are ruined by Chinese cheap labor."
And he went for that heathen Chinee.

In the scene that ensued
I did not take a hand;
But the floor it was strewed,
Like the leaves on the strand,
With the cards that Ah Sin had been hiding,
In the game "he did not understand."

In his sleeves, which were long,
He had recently put packs,
Which was coming it strong,
Yet I state but the facts
And we found on his nails, which were taper,
What is frequent in tapers—that's wax.

Which is why I remark,
And my language is plain,
That for ways that are dark
And for tricks that are vain
The heathen Chinese is peculiar;
Which the same I am free to maintain.

Select Story.

JUST IN TIME.

Dinner was over at last, and Mr. Walter Currie, English Commissioner at the up country station at Huttee-Bagh, in Northern India, had gone upon the verandah with his wife and his two guests, the Colonel and Major of the —th Light Infantry to enjoy the cool of the evening.

On three sides the house was surrounded by its compound, a large enclosed space, serving the purpose of a courtyard, but the fourth was only separated by a small patch of garden from the public road, along which a number of native women were passing with their little pitchers on their heads.

The sight of them naturally turned the conversation upon a favorite subject with all Anglo-Indians, viz., the character of the natives and the best method of dealing with them.

"There's only one way," said the Colonel, emphatically. "Tell 'em what they are to do, make 'em do it, and thrash 'em well if they don't. That's my way."

"Well, I venture to differ from you there, Colonel," said Mr. Currie, quietly. "I've had to do some thrashing once or twice, I own, but most of my native servants seem to get along very well without it, and they serve me excellently, I assure you."

"I wish you had been in my place, then," retorted the Colonel; "you'd have changed your opinion, I warrant. Why, the year before last, when I had charge of two battalions of the rascals down at Suttepoor, because there wasn't another Queen's officer within reach—just like my confounded luck!—there was no getting anything done unless I did it myself. By Jove, sir! I had to be everything at once—my own Quarter Master, Sergeant-Major, my own caterer, and—"

"And your own trumpter, Colonel Annesley!" asked Mrs. Currie, with an arch smile.

The Colonel's broad face reddened ominously, and an explosion seemed imminent, when a sudden clamor of angry voices from the road below drew them all to the front of the verandah.

The cause of the disturbance was visible at a glance. Two half-drunken English soldiers, swaggering along the road, had come into violent contact with a native boy who was running past; and one of them, enraged at the collision had felled the poor lad to the ground, and was unclasping his own belt with the evident intention of beating him unmercifully.

"Serve the young whelp right," shouted the Colonel, rubbing his hands; "that's what they all want."

The other officer, Major Armstrong—popularly called Major Strongarm—was a huge, brawny, silent man, whose forte lay in acting rather than in talking.

During the whole discussion he had sat like a bronze statue, never uttering a word; but at sight of this man ill using the child he woke up rather startlingly.

To leap to the ground twelve feet below, to dart across the garden, to vault over the high stockade beyond was the work of a moment for the athletic Major; and in another it s aat he had raised the fallen boy tenderly from the ground, while saying to the foremost soldier, in the low, compressed tone of a man who means what he says;

"Be off with you!"

"And who the deuce are you, shovin' yer nose in where you ain't wanted!" roared the infuriated ruffian, to whose eyes the Major's plain evening dress bore no token of his being an officer; "jist you—"

The sentence was never finished.

At the sound of that insolent defiance Armstrong's sorely tried patience gave way altogether, and the powerful right hand which had hewed its way through a whole squadron of Sikh cavalry fell like a sledge hammer upon his opponent's face, dashing him to the ground as if he had been blown from the mouth of a gun.

"Well done, Major Armstrong!" shouted Mr. Currie from above. "You deserve your name and no mistake."

At that formidable name, the soldier took to his heels at once; and Armstrong, without even looking at his prostrate antagonist, proceeded to examine the hurts of the boy.

The latter was sorely bruised in many places, and the blood was trickling freely over his swarthy face; but the little hero still did his best to stand erect and to keep down every sign of the pain which he was enduring.

"You're a brave lad, and you'll make a soldier some day," said the Major to him in Hindoostanee. "Come with me, and I'll see that no one molests you again."

The lad seized the huge brown hand which had defended him so bravely and kissed it with the deepest reverence, and the two walked away together.

Six months have come and gone, and Mr. Currie's hospitable house presents a very different spectacle. The pretty garden is trampled into dust and mire, and the bodies of men and horses are lying thick among the fragments of the half-destroyed stockade.

All the windows of the house are blocked up, and through the loop-holed walls appear the muzzles of ready rifles, showing how steadily the besieged garrison stands at bay against the countless enemies, whose dark, fierce faces and glittering weapons are visible amid the half ruined building and matted thickets all around.

The Sepoy mutiny of 1857 is blazing sky high over Northern India, and Colonel Annesley is blockaded in Huttee-Bagh, with a certainty of a hideous death for himself and every man of the few who are still true to him, unless help comes speedily.

Day was just breaking when two men held a whispered counsel in one of the upper rooms.

"No fear of the water running short," said Major Armstrong; "but, even upon half rations, the food will be out in four days more."

"And then we'll just go right at them, and cut our way through or die for it!" growled the old Colonel, with a grim smile on his iron face, for, with all his harshness and injustice Colonel Annesley was "grit" to the back-bone. "We mustn't say anything to them about it, though," added he, with a side glance at Mr. Currie, who, standing in the further corner, was anxiously watching the thin, worn face of his sleeping wife.

At that moment a loud cheer from below startled them both, and the next moment Ismail (the "Major's boy," as every one now called him) burst into the room, with a glow of unwonted excitement on his dark face.

"Sahib," cried he, "there is hope for us yet! A detachment of Ingleez (English) are coming up the other bank of the river; if we can send word to them as they pass we are saved!"

"How do you know?" asked the major, eagerly.

"I heard the Sepoys say so, while I was lying hid among the bushes yonder," answered the lad.

"Among the bushes yonder?" roared the Colonel, facing around. "Have you really been in the midst of those cut throat villains, listening to what they said? Whatever did you do that for?"

"I did it for Sahib Armstrong's sake," replied the boy, proudly; "because he was good to me."

The Colonel turned hastily away to hide the flush of hot unmanly shame that overspread his hard face; and Armstrong smiled slightly as he heard him mutter:

"By Jove! these chaps aren't so black as they're painted after all."

"But if the troops are beyond the river, how can we communicate with them?" asked Mrs. Currie, who awakened by the shouting, had arisen and joined the group. "They may not pass near enough to hear the firing, and we have no means of sending them word."

"Fear nothing for that, mem-sahib" (madame), answered the Hindoo boy, quietly. "I will carry them word myself."

"But how can you possibly do it?" cried Mrs. Currie, thunderstruck by the confident tone in which this mere child spoke of a task from which the hardiest veteran might well have shrunk.

"Listen, sahib," answered Ismail. "I will slip out of the house and make a dash into the enemy's lines, as if I were deserting from you to them, and you can tell your people to fire a shot or two after me with blank cartridge as I go. Then the Sepoys will receive me kindly, and I'll tell them that yo'ure all dying of thirst and that they need only wait one day more to be sure of you, so that they won't care much to make another attack. Then, when they have no suspicion, and think I'm quite one of themselves, I'll steal away and slip across the river."

"But you are quite sure the Sepoys will believe you?" asked Major Armstrong doubtfully.

"They'll believe this, anyhow," replied the boy, deliberately making a deep gash in his bare shoulder and staining his white frock with the blood as he glided from the room, followed by Armstrong. The plan was soon explained to the men below, and a moment later Ismail's dark figure was seen darting like an arrow across the open space in front of the building, followed by a quick discharge of blank cartridges from the marksmen at the loopholes. The sound of the firing drew the attention of Sepoys, several of whom ran forward to meet him.

In another instant he was in the midst of them.

"I can scarcely see for those bushes," said Colonel Annesley; "but he seems to be showing them the wound on his shoulder, and telling them it was our doing."

At that moment an exulting yell from the enemy came pealing through the air.

That's the story of our being short of water, for a guinea!" said the Major; "it was a very good thought of his. If it only delays their attack two days longer. There may be time for help to arrive yet."

Slowly and wearily the long hours of that fearful day wore on. The heat was so terrible that even the native soldiers of the garrison could barely hold their own against it, and the handful of Englishmen were almost helpless. Had the Sepoys attacked them, all would have been over at one blow; but hour passed after hour, and there was no sign of an assault.

At length as afternoon gave place to evening, movement began to show itself in the enemy's lines. Thin curls of smoke rising above the trees showed that the evening's meal was in preperation; and several figures with pitchers in their hands were seen going towards the river among who the Colonel's keen eye soon detected Ismail.

"By George!" cried the old soldier, slapping his knee exultingly, "that lad's worth his weight in gold! There's his way down to the river right open to him without the least chance of suspicion. Why he's a born gentleman—nothing less!"

Every eye within the walls are now turned anxiously upon the distant group fearing to see at any moment some movement which would show that the trick was detected. How did Ismail mean to accomplish this purpose? Would he plunge boldly into the river, without any disguise, or had he some farther stratagem in preparation? No one could say.

Suddenly, as Ismail stooped to plunge his light wooden dipper into the water, it slipped from his hands and went floating down stream. A cry of dismay, a loud laugh from the Sepoys, and then the boy was seen running frantically along the bank and trying in vain to catch the vessel as it floated past.

"What on earth is he up to?" grunted the Colonel, completely mystified.

"I see!" cried Major Armstrong, triumphantly; "there's a boat yonder among the reeds, and he's making right for it. Well done my brave boy!"

But at that moment a yell of rage from the Sepoys told them he was discovered.

Luckily those on bank had left their pieces behind, or poor Ismail would soon have been disposed of; but the alarm instantly brought up a crowd of their armed comrades, whose bullets fell like hail around the boat and its gallant little pilot.

"Let us fire a volley and make a show of sallying out," said the Colonel; "it'll take their attention from him."

But in this he was mistaken.

The first rattle of musketry from behind the house did not recall most of Ismail's assailants, but at least a dozen were left, who kept up an incessant firing striking the boat again and again.

All at once the Colonel dashed his glass to the floor with a frightful oath.

Between the two gusts of smoke he had seen the boat turn suddenly over, and go whirling down the river, keel upward.

"There's an end to the poor lad," muttered the veteran, brokenly. "God bless him for he is a brave little fellow. And, now, old friend, we must just die hard, for there is no hope left."

The first few hours of night passed quietly, and the exhausted defenders, utterly worn out, slept as if drugged with opium. But a little after midnight the quick ears of the two veteran officers—the only watchers in the whole garrison, except the sentries themselves—caught a faint stirring in the surrounding thickets which seemed to argue some movement on the part of the enemy.

Listening intently for a few moments, they felt certain that they were right, and lost no time in arousing their men.

The scanty stores of food were opened once more, and, crouching together in the darkness, the doomed men took what they fully believed to be their last meal on earth.

"They're coming!" said Major Armstrong, straining his eyes into the gloom through a loophole. "I hear them creeping forward, though I don't see them."

"What the duce was that!" exclaimed the Colonel, suddenly. "It looked like a firey arrow flying past.

"It's worse than than," said the Major in a low voice. "The rascals are shooting lighted chips of bamboo on to the roof to set it on fire. Send the women up with buckets to flood the thatch; there's not a moment to loose."

"I'll go and see to it myself!" cried Mrs Currie, hastening out of the room.

But the power of this new weapon had already become fatally manifest. The house was an old one, and dry as tinder from the prolonged heat, and as fast as the flames were quenched in one place they broke out in another.

When day dawned the fire had already got a firm hold of one corner of the building, and a crushing discharge was poured upon all who attempted to extinguish it, while the triumphant yell of the human tigers below told them that they felt sure of their prey.

"It's all over with us, old fellow," said the Colonel, grasping the old comrade's hand; "but at least we shall have done our duty."

"Give me one of your pistols," whispered Mrs. Currie to her husband, in a voice that was not her own. "I must not fall into their hands alive."

At that moment Major Armstrong seen to start and bend forward, as if listening intently; for he thought—although he could scarcely believe his ears—that he had suddenly caught a faint sound of distant firing.

In another instant he heard it again, and this time there could be no more doubt, for several of the others had caught it likewise, and a gleam of hope once more lighted up their haggard faces and bloodshot eyes.

Louder and nearer came the welcome sound, while the sudden terror and confusion visible among the enemy showed that they, too, were at no loss to guess its meaning.

Then high above all the din rose the well-known "Hurrah!" and through the smoke clouds broke a charging line of glittering bayonets and ruddy English faces, sweeping away the cowardly murderers as the sun chases the morning mist.

"That boy's worth his weight in gold," said Colonel Annesley, as, a few hours later, he listened to Ismail's account of how he had dived under the boat and kept it between himself and the Sepoys, that they might think him drowned. "He's the pluckiest little fellow I've seen and," although he belongs to the Major, "I'm going to take my share of helping him on, by jove!"

A Losing Joke.

A prominent physician of Pittsburgh said jokingly to a lady patient who was complaining of her continued ill health, and of his inability to cure her, "try Hop Bitters!" The lady took it in earnest and used the Bitters, from which she obtained permanent health. She now laughs at the doctor for his joke, but he is not so well pleased with it as it cost him a good patient.—Harrisburg Patriot.

Friday, Nov. 19, 1880.

We have a little space to devote to the Milton Argus this week, and then we are done with it. In reply to his puerile charge that no paper was sent to him two weeks ago, because we "were ashamed to have it come to his notice" we say to the editor of that paper that a copy was regularly mailed from this office, and we know of no cause why it failed to reach him. If our reputation for veracity were like his, we would make an affidavit that the exchange copy was mailed, but our readers will take our statement as the truth. If this paper has always reached him before, why did it fail that week? Our only answer is that we do not believe him. It is a false allegation on his part made for the purpose of giving him an opportunity to display his ability as an expert in blackguardism. The idea that we or any body else should be "afraid" of anything he might say in reply is too absurd to merit any comment.

As to who wrote the articles in the Argus concerning Mr. Vanderslice, it is of little moment now. The false and malicious statements contained in them were fully refuted by the record, and by Senator Jackson's letter, both of which were brought to the notice of the people of this county, and upon the authority of which, the Democrats were satisfied that he did not cast a corrupt vote in the riot bill case, and they therefore decided to return him to the Legislature, and did so, thereby showing their contempt for the unjustifiable attacks made upon his personal character by the Argus.

As a complete refutation to the charge that this paper "sold out to the riot bill gang" we repeat what we have said before, to wit, that any one who believes this lie, is requested to call and examine the files of that time. They will show that we opposed the bill from first to last and all the time. A large number of the leading papers of the State published the bill as we did, and all were exonerated from any corrupt motive by the Philadelphia Press, Times, and many others, which characterized the matter as simply a business transaction. The legislative committee appointed to investigate the case, made no charge of corruption against any of the journals that published the bill. It is only such petty sheets as the Milton Argus that keep reiterating the charge of "selling out," after it has long been shown to be utterly false. To repeat the allegation now, so far as this paper is concerned, is a cowardly attack on a gentleman no longer connected with it, who testified under oath before the committee that the advertising was done at regular rates, and that the paper was unalterably opposed to the measure as presented. To allege otherwise is to charge that gentleman with perjury.

In closing his article of last week, undoubtedly emanating from his ponderous brain, the editor offers an insult to the Democracy of this county which should be resented by every Democratic subscriber here, if he has any, by discontinuing his paper. He says that Columbia "confesses that but a single honest and capable Democrat can be found among the entire population of that county." His opinion may have been formed from the fact that the people of this county could not appreciate the sheet published by him for some years, and after shifting about from one point to another he was finally compelled to load his office on a wheelbarrow and remove to another county.

We shall not adopt the insulting style of the editor of the Argus by sending him a stamped copy of this issue, as we do not care to waste one cent on such material, but shall mail him the usual exchange copy this week, and then drop him from our list.

THE MOREY LETTER.

Chief Justice Davis of the Supreme court of New York rendered a decision in the case of Kenward Philp, charged with libeling General Garfield in connection with the Morey Chinese letter on Saturday; the decision is long. It is in substance that Philp be held for criminal libel for writing the editorial "Lying and Sticking to It," when he knew the Morey letter to be a forgery. The court holds that the letter is a forgery, and criticizes sharply the testimony of certain prominent Democrats. Judge Davis's decision in the case of Philp is in substance as follows:

No newspaper had a right to publish as genuine, any forged or false instrument. The Morey letter is a forgery and the editorial calling Garfield a liar libelous. The offender under the code could only be reached by a prosecution for criminal libel, and the writer could be prosecuted for the offense. The envelope bore evidence of erasures and was also a forgery. The evidence did not prove the existence of an organization called the Laborers' union, nor of such a man as H. L. Morey. The existence of such a person as John W. Goodale, the man alleged to have forwarded the Morey letter to Mr. Hart, publisher of Truth, was not proven, neither that such a man was ever appointed executor of the estate of a man named H. L. Morey. Judge Davis was of the the opinion that Morey was a myth. Men who professed to know him had confessed themselves perjurers. Philp asserted in his article that the letter was genuine, and must be held to answer unless he proved it. If the letter was genuine it was lawful to publish it. If not genuine it was unlawful. Even the entries of H. L. Morey on the Lych hotel registers were forgeries.

Judge Davis said the evidence of ex-congressman Abraham S. Hewitt astonished him. He, according to Hart's testimony induced the publication of the forged letter, pronouncing it genuine. Hewitt's opinion and motive were subjects for consideration. His connection with the letter and the proceedings were of an extraordinary character. It was astounding that a person of his experience and sagacity should under the suspicious circumstances pronounce this letter genuine. Upon Mr. Hewitt must rest a large share of the responsibility for the publication, as it went to the country under the sanction of his endorsement. Philp was guilty of criminal libel for publishing a libelous article knowing the letter to be a forgery. Judge Davis concluded as follows: "The evidence adduced in the case also tends to establish a great conspiracy concocted, or at least abetted, by men in high stations in life. The question of their actual guilt will be left to a jury of their countrymen to determine." Philp was held to bail to answer the charge.

Abraham S. Hewitt has written a letter in reply to Judge Davis' opinion. He says that the Judge who sits upon the bench is supposed to know the evidence which has been given by a witness. Certainly he should examine it before he undertakes to make statements as to its nature and to draw conclusions from it. Judge Davis has not performed his duty. Mr. Hewitt then quotes that portion of the opinion given above which refers to himself and says:

Now, the simple and unanswerable reply to all this statement and the extraordinary comments in which Judge Davis has seen fit to indulge in that the letter had already been in Truth before I had ever seen a Mr Hart or the original letter or any copy of it. This fact Judge Davis must have known when he penned the above lines, because I had sworn in his presence and after cross-examination of Mr. Stoughton, in which Mr. Bliss intervened to verify the dates, that the interview with Mr. Hart and the examination of the letter took place on the 20th of October, after its publication in Truth and not before. I do not know whether Mr. Hart made a mistake in his testimony as to the date, but if he did there is no possible justification for Judge Davis to base a statement on this mistake in order to attack from the bench the character of a citizen after the date had been fixed beyond the possibility of all controversy.

While writing this statement I sent a messenger to Mr. Hart to ascertain whether he had ever made any declaration at variance with the facts as I have stated them. Mr. Hart replies that he "never said, testified or thought that Mr. Hewitt or any one connected with the national committee saw the letter in advance of the publication of the text of the letter in Truth on the 20th day of October." Now as to the minor assertions contained in the above extract, I never pronounced the "body and signature" of the letter to be in the handwriting of General Garfield. On the contrary, in the presence of Mr. Hart and all the gentlemen present I declared the body of the letter not to be in the handwriting of General Garfield, but that I believed the signature to be his autograph. I do not think that Mr. Hart has given any testimony to the contrary, but if he has it is an error, which can be shown by the testimony of all the gentlemen who were present. As to the second interview in the evening, it took place after my speech at Chickering Hall, when I was exhausted and took no other part in the discussion but to reaffirm my belief in the genuineness of the signature. I did not tell Mr. Hart that "I would have made it a forgery if I could," nor has he or any one else testified that I ever used this expression. With this statement I leave it to the public to judge how utterly loose is Judge Davis' judgment.

I forbear to make any commentary whatever upon the extraordinary character of the opinion pronounced by Judge Davis. It is enough for me to point out that the foundation upon which he has built up the attack upon my character is false in fact and with this demonstration the consequences can only be damaging to himself.

In commenting on this case, the Philadelphia Times says:

"If the Morey letter was not written by General Garfield, and pretty much everybody now believes that it was a forgery, the language used by Judge Davis in regard to the gravity of the offense is none too severe. There have been forgeries affecting greater interests, perhaps, but none more deserving of public as well as judicial condemnation. Judge Davis, however, goes to the extent of superserviceable partisanry in attacking—we might almost say abusing—Mr. Heweitt, whose good name was in no way compromised by the record of the case in which this decision was rendered. Mr. Hewitt, like many others well acquainted with General Garfield's handwriting, and knowing that the sentiments expressed in the letter were those entertained by him, believed it to be genuine until General Garfield denied it, and after the denial refrained from expressing any opinion on the subject. It was not to be expected that on a casual examination he should take in all the fine points as to the circumstances under which the letter was found, the envelope, post-mark and all those things which a thorough investigation has impressed upon the mind of Judge Davis, and the latter's denunciation of a man whose reputation is equal to his own for all that goes to make up good character is therefore gratuitous and to those who know both parties suggests malice. As to the Philp case, to which the Judge seems to have paid little attention in his decision, those who have followed the testimony will not agree that there is any reason to hold Philp on the charge of forgery, but to send him on for trial on the charge of criminal libel was certainly justifiable. It is doubtful whether we shall ever find out who wrote that letter, but if we do there will be no danger that the forger will escape justice.

Hon. Robert Klotz.

It is a remarkable coincident that this gentleman who was barely elected two years ago by ninety-five, the smallest plurality of any Congressman in the State, is now elected by about 8,500, which is probably the largest congressional majority in the State. And this, after he served but a single session at Washington. It proves that when a man discharges public duty faithfully, and proves himself in every respect the true servant of the people, he is sure to command the cordial support af the Democracy at least. Here at his own home and in his own ward, which is decidedly Republican, and in spite of the desperate efforts to run him behind the ticket, and without special personal efforts on his own part, he carried the ward by just one majority. The Democracy of the 11th District have cause to be proud of their representative—a self-made man, and justly enjoying the very enviable reputation of being the most industrious worker in the present Congress.—Carbon Democrat.

The election is over and the "business peril" politicians have gone back into their holes. But the manufacturers who frightened their employees with threats of closing their works in the event of Hancock's election or lured them into voting for Garfield by promises of higher wages are already beginning to show forgetfulness of their electioneering predictions and pledges. For instance, the Dobson Brothers, carpet manufacturers, Philadelphia, who said to their employees before the election, "If you want better pay vote for Garfield," on Friday last gave notice that wages would be reduced ten per cent. William Dolan, another Philadelphia carpet manufacturer, has notified his employees of a similar reduction of wages. H. W. Gray, superintendent of the Schomacker piano manufacturing company, who told his workman that those of them who voted for Hancock would be discharged, has reduced the time of his employees so as to lower their earnings very considerably. These are instances which have come accidentally within our knowledge. Doubtless there are many more of like character. This simply proves that the employer who is base enough to intimidate his workmen at elections, or to play upon their fears by threatening to close his works in case his candidate fails of election, or to delude them with promises of better wages in the event of his candidate's success, is mean enough to cheat them after the election is over.—Patriot.

Sale of Libby Prison.

THAT FAMOUS REBEL PRISON DISPOSED OF AT AUCTION.

Last week the sale of Libby prison, in Richmond, for $6,725, has revived many interesting reminiscences of this historic old building. The old building is now occupied by F. M. Boyken as a tobacco factory. Appended is a brief sketch of its history.

Libby prison was the most famous of the confederate military posts, and by the confederate government it was ranked as the most secure, although the success of the tunneling enterprise of Straight Rose and others rather depreciated the idea of its safety, and caused Major Turner to double his guards. The Libby, in outward appearance, has changed little since the war. Even the sign although now much weather stained and rather indistinct, is there still—'Libby prison." The iron bars have been taken away from the windows and sold as old iron. Soon after the war the prison was without tenants, but finally a northern gentleman rented it and fitted it up as a sumac warehouse. Subsequently it was used as a tobacco steamery, and then as a tobacco factory. The building has a front of 140 feet and a depth of 105 feet. When it was used as a prison it was divided into nine rooms, each room 102 feet long and 45 feet wide. The partitions have been knocked down. In many places on the walls there can still be seen letters and dates carved in the bricks by federal captives. Scattered about there are designs by those prisoners who were artistically inclined and had a turn for the sculptor's art. Skull's crossbones, coffins, chains are mixed up with more ambitious attempts in the shape of thin-legged animals, which the beholder's fancy can take for horses, cows or dragons.

Men who were confined in the Libby are scattered all over the Union, and yet it may be doubted whether there is one in a hundred who knows the history of Libby prison. It was built as a warehouse by an old citizen of Richmond, Mr. Libby, and up to ten years before the war he occupied the building. When the war began the sign, "Libby & Sons, Ship Chandlers and Grocers," was over the entrance, and remained there up to the year 1863. Many a federal prisoner will remember seeing it. Old Mr. Libby lived on Church hill in the lower portion of the city, near the historic St, John church, in which Patrick Henry delivered his immortal oration, concluding "but for me give me liberty or give me death." This hill, overlooking the river, since the war, has been toned into a park. In his warehouse Mr Libby amassed a large fortune.

Libby prison was not the first choice of the confederate government as a military prison. Soon after the commencement of hostilities the authorities began to look around for a suitable building as a prison for Union soldiers They fixed upon a large frame building in what is known as Lumpkin alley. This was the first military prison in Richmond, and perhaps the south, and was called "Castle Goodwin." It had been built and used as a "jail" for the housing of slaves before they were sold. Lumpkin alley was filled with these large houses called "jails," and here the slave sales took place. Castle Goodwin had not been used a year before it was found to be too small for the accomodation of the prisoners, and the confederate authorities fixed upon the large warehouse of Libby & Sons, "on the dock."

Castle Goodwin was nearly a mile from the river and in a low swampy portion of the city. It is a singular fact that none of the Libby prison officials are now in Richmond. There are quite a number of ex confederates who acted as guards at the prison still living in Richmond. Major Turner, the commandant of Libby, was one of the youngest officers in the confederate service, and his rank was owing to the fact that he had been at West Point. When the states seceded he was a cadet there, and at once resigned and came south. He held the position of commandment of the Libby until the close of the war, when he went to Mexico and experienced an adventurous life with Maximilian. Afterward he returned to Mississippi, studied dentistry, and one of his friends says that he is now a successful dentist in Memphis.

Changing Front on the Tariff.

The Republican change of front on the tariff question has begun even sooner than we expected. The ablest republican journal in the country with possibly a single exception, could not wait until the result of the presidential election was officially determined, before calling upon General Garfield to throw aside the mask he is supposed to have assumed for campaign purposes and to come out boldly for revenue reform. The Evening Post was sure all along, but did not feel that it was safe to say that the republican candidate for president "has reached clear and liberal conclusions" in respect to this question. This is the old cant phrase of the free traders. If this assurance had been voiced sooner it might have stopped the flow of money from manufacturing establishments into the republican campaign fund, and perhaps have cost Garfield the votes of Pennsylvania and Connecticut. But there is now no necessity for concealment. The Post will be followed in course of time and at decent intervals by the Chicago Tribune, the New York Times and the Cincinnatti Commercial, and their demands will have weight, for they have borne the heat of the fight for Garfield's election. When the fight waxes warm, if not before, the solid men of business whose money and whose influence turned the tide of battle will realize once more that when business plays into the hands of the politicians it is not the politicans who get the worst of the game.—Columbia Herald.

Garfield's Bargain.

The smoke of the battle having cleared away, and the result become assured, thoughtful persons of each party are beginning to ponder seriously as to the bargain made between Garfield and the Grant leaders. That there was such a bargain made does not seem to be questioned. Not only do all the facts of the case justify such a conclusion, but the Republicans have never made any effort to deny it. The only thing about the compact unknown is the terms; the existence of the agreement is an open secret, in which the whole country shares. If there was no such bargain made, why did Conkling, Cameron, Logan and the other Grant stalwarts, who hitherto had persistently sneered at and turned their backs upon Garfield, assemble at Mentor, Ohio, his own home, and after the meeting at once plunge ardently into a canvass which up to that time they had retarded rather than assisted? When Garfield was in New York, though he requested an interview with Conkling, the latter scornfully refused to see him. Why did the latter, a little later on, go all the way to Mentor for an interview, and call with him the other prominent third-termers?

The truth is, that Garfield, finding the current setting against him, foresaw that unless he obtained the support of the third-term faction, which really contains the brains and organization of the Republican party, he was doomed to sure defeat. Up to that time his was a lagging cause; Maine had bolted from the Republican column, and the clouds of disaster were darkening all around the skies. To hold any reasonable hope of victory, he must make peace with those forces which the party that named him had overcome in the Chicago convention. It is reasonable to conclude that the only terms to be entertained were those of a complete surrender; indeed, when Garfield was in New York, Conkling's friends outlined to him the price of the latter's assistance, but so much was exacted that the Presidential aspirant refused to accede. Later events changed his mind. Success, with any unscrupulous agreement or stultifying condition, was preferable to an honest defeat, with a clear conscience; and so he closed the bargain.

Is it reasonable to suppose that the terms of the compact, refused at New York on account of their stultifying features, grew any more savory during the interval before the Mentor conference? On the contrary it is safe to conclude that the Grant men were all the more grasping, since Garfield knew what he had not before, the extreme necessity of their services.

The terms, whatever they were, Garfield acceded to, and the Grant men fell to work. Indiana was moved down upon by their forces, and by that matchless power of organization which they possess, and by the vast sums of money they command, that State was wrested from the Democrats to whom it rightfully belonged, and the tide of battle turned. New York then became the decisive State, and this Conkling thorugh the mysterious methods of his most worthy henchman and fellow candidate, Arthur, secured by buying out the unscrupulous Kelly, who for a price sacrificed his own party.

The victory, then, is a Grant victory, and the Grant men will claim it. Garfield will find he has sold his independence and his power of position for a mess of pottage, and though nominally the chief, will be a puppet to dance when the Grant men pull the strings. What profits the opposition of more than three-fourths of the Republican party to the Grant faction; they are again in power, bringing up to the surface all the infamous record of corruptions, embezzlements, malfeasance and abuses of power that blot the history of our nation. The full terms of Garfield's surrender will be but gradually learned, but they will be complete, debasing and contemptible. Certainly the Republican party has not great cause for rejoicing in their victory, for they have fallen a prey to the Philistines in their own camp, betrayed by the very one set up to battle with foes within as well as foes without. —Jeffersonian.

A report has been circulated that a certain republican was discharged by his Democratic employer, because he did not vote for Hancock. There is no truth in it. He was discharged because he refused to work when his employer needed his services. Politics had nothing to do with it. Any business man would have done the same.

Photographs for the Holidays. At Snyder's Gallery you can procure all the leading styles and sizes furnished in a most superior manner. This is the only Gallery in this section of the State where proofs are shown and complete satisfaction guaranteed. Where also can be found a complete assortment of fine Velvet and Ebony Frames, Easels, and 8x10 frames at the lowest prices Gallery corner Main and Centre streets, over H. J. Clark & Son's Dry Goods Emporium.

The Republican of last week, kindly exonerates the Democratic party from any blame for the "attempted disturbances along the line of march" at the last parade. The insinuation seems to be that all persons guilty of lawlessness were Democrats. The truth is that there were disturbances every time there was a parade during the campaign, but it was whiskey and not politics that caused them. No party is responsible for the lawless acts of fighting rowdies on such occasions.

The Republican speaks unadvisedly when it says that the Democrats have carried this town at every election since 1865 with the exception of 1870. The tables of votes from that time to the present show the following republican majorities:

For Governor, 1866,	71
For Congress, 1870,	31
For President, 1872,	81
For President, 1876,	2

The Democratic majorities have ranged from 15 to 43 with the exception of three years when they were greater than the majority of 1880.

THE VOLTAIC BELT CO., MARSHALL, MICH.

Will send their celebrated Electro-Voltaic Belts to the afflicted upon 30 days trial. Speedy cures guaranteed. They mean what they say. Write to them without delay. Nov. 21-1y.

The Republican does not appear to like it because we printed some extracts referring to Garfield's record after the election. It calls us a "mud slinging machine." Well, as all the extracts published in this paper were taken from what republican newspapers said of Garfield in 1873, just after a republican congressional committee had reported in effect that they did not believe him under oath, it may properly be called "mud-slinging." It is an appropriate name to be applied to most anything that is printed in republican papers. But if the Republican thinks that because Garfield has been elected President, his public record will be buried out of sight, it is simply mistaken. He made it for himself, and his party denounced him for it, and neither the party nor its organs have ever retracted one word, except by nominating him for the highest office in the nation, by which act they openly endorsed his entire record. As the leading republican papers have never taken back what they said in 1873, how can it be expected that the Democracy will admit that their charges were all false?

A NEW PAYING OCCUPATION

—FOR—

LADIES & GENTLEMEN

The Hand-some Nickel Plated New Home Lamp being introduced to the public this season, is the most meritorious article ever offered agents to make money with, is safer and more convenient than the student lamp, which has heretofore had the reputation of being the safest lamp made, it has a clamp to attach it to the sewing machine, piano, organ, desk, etc. The fear of the ordinary lamp being accidentally upset or thrown from the table, is entirely relieved by the simple clamp contrivance. It can be adjusted to throw the light just where it is wanted to suit the eyes, and can be converted into a handsome wall lamp It has the best argand burner, a filling indicat r, and convenient match box, and its price is within the reach of every one. It has been fully tested and editorially endorsed by the Western Christian Advocate, Am. Christian Review, Herald and Presbyter, Journal and Messenger, and Christian Standard, the leading religious papers of Cincinnati, and is endorsed by the Mayor and Postmaster of Cincinnati, the agent of the American express company and presidents of insurance companies, as being the safest, most convenient and best lamp made.

There are three reasons why agents should seek such an article to canvass for—first for its absolute safety and great convenience, it is needed in every home—second its low price makes its sale immense—third it will be a great credit to handle such an article. One southern agent writes, it sells faster than Gen. Lee's portrait sold right after the war, another writes, it beats the palmy days of the sewing machine, its rapid sale, low price, and liberal terms surprise old agents. Address Home Lamp Co, Cincinnati, O, mentioning our paper and they will give you full particulars and exclusive territory to canvass in. nov.5-13w

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

There is a fair prospect that Center Street will be widened between Ridge alley and First street. The Lutheran and Reformed congregations have fixed terms upon which the necessary land can be taken from the old cemetery.

The A. S. T. Co. Black Tip for children's shoes adds to their beauty, while doubling the wearing value of the shoe. All parents who have used them testify to this.

The in-sane man whose friends were advertised for last week, was returned to the Danville Asylum by Sheriff Ent, last Saturday. He escaped from there several weeks ago. His name is George Vanbuskirk, and his residence is in Bradford county. He showed no disinclination to return to the asylum.

We have much pleasure in recommending Thermaline to our readers, as an absolute cure for Malaria. The manufacturers' name alone is a guarantee of its merit. It sells at 25 cents per box. For particulars see Advt.

On Monday evening a tramp walked into the law office of Robert Buckingham, Esq., during the absence of the occupant, and walked out again with Mr. Buckingham's overcoat on his back. Neither the tramp nor the coat has been seen since.

Are you going to paint? If so, send to the Montour Paint Mills, Rupert, Pa., for your Pure Lead, Slate Colors, Pure Paints, &c., and save the wholesale and retail profit. You can mix your own colors with pure linseed oil for 85 cents to $1 20 per gallon. sep. 10-3m

James Scarlet, Esq., of Danville, was accidentally shot while out gunning recently. Several shot entered his face, and it is reported that the sight of one eye was destroyed. We hope this is not true. Mr. Scarlet has the best wishes of his many friends for his speedy recovery.

There was a very pleasant party at the residence of Mr. D. Lowenberg on last Tuesday evening. A number of ladies and gentlemen, friends of Miss Rebecca Lowenberg, took her by surprise at about half past eight and spent the balance of the evening. It was an enjoyable occasion.

If,after a fair test, you are not cured of gravel, nervous debility, or any disease of the kidneys by using Dr. Guilmette's French Kidney Pad, then the druggist from whom you bought will refund the money paid.

A week ago republicans were proclaiming that a reward of $1500 would be paid for the man who painted any banners of a personal character for their last parade. Now, that the banners are destroyed, if they had any, they are offering five dollars reward for the banners, but none for the man who painted them. Are they afraid the man will be found?

Mr. W. C. Evans and Miss Mary Kelley of this town, were married at Danville on Thursday morning. Mr. Evans was formerly a typo, having graduated at this office. We wish him and his bride much joy.

What does the Republican mean by saying we dare not publish our connection with the publication of the Chinese letter? We printed it because we believed it to be genuine, and because Garfield's record shows that the letter expressed his sentiments. The partisan decision of Judge Davis in the case does not change our opinion. If the Republican means to insinuate that we received pay from any one for the publication,we denounce the charge as utterly false.

Our remark of last week about the $300 received by the chairman of the republican county committee seems to have made him mad. His paper this week is brim full of what he thinks are very smart things. So intent is he upon paying us off for exposing him that he forgets to deny that he received the money, and thereby admits that he got it. It is no more our business what he did with it, than it is his what we charge candidates for tickets, but many Republicans are talking about it and would like to know whether it is worth $300 to print hand bills and tickets for local meetings and candidates, Since we have been in the newspaper business not one dollar has ever been received by us from any source outside of the county for political purposes, the only money we have got, coming from the candidates for tickets and campaign printing by making assessments upon them, our charges being less than in any adjoining county for the same work. Our bill has never been disputed but in one instance,and then the editor of the Republican testified that our charge was reasonable. He either swore to wont he did not believe then, or else he knows that his present insinuations are false. We have no doubt of the fact that the Republican has pocketed more money from their State Committee at every general election in the last five years than we have received from candidates or any body else for the same work, and that in a county where our candidates are always elected

Murderers to be Hanged.

WARRANTS TO BE ISSUED BY THE GOVERNOR FOR THE EXECUTION OF HAYS, SULLIVAN, GEORGE SMITH AND CATHARINE MILLER.

On Nov., 10 Governor Hoyt signed the death warrant of Patrick Hays and Daniel F. Sullivan, both convicted of murder in the courts of Philadelphia, fixing the day of execution for Thursday January 6, 1880. Hays was convicted of murdring his wife, Bridget, and was on the 17th day of July, 1880, sentenced to be hanged. Sullivan was convicted of murder of Josephine, alias Josie Irwin and was sentenced on the 1st of November, 1879, to be hanged.

The governor also issued the death warrants of Catharine Miller and George Smith, who were convicted in the courts of Lycoming county May 8, 1880, of the murder of Andrew Miller (Catharine's husband), and sentenced June 11, 1880, to be hanged. The execution of Smith and Mrs. Miller will take place on Thursday, January 6.

Frank Small, of Allegheny, is the only remaining murderer under sentence of death in this State, the time for whose execution has not been fixed. Small was convicted of the murder of a German and was sentenced in April, 1879, to be hanged. Small's case has been laid before the Board of Pardons on application for a commutation of the death sentence to life imprisonment.

ROUND ABOUT ROARINGCREEK.

Tuesday, Nov., 16 1880.

The election here passed off as quiet as usual save considerable challenging by both parties.

Quite a number of persons of Locust were attending to some legal business at our County seat last Saturday.

While hunting during election day (the 2nd inst.) J. M. Snyder shot two rabbits at one shot. This is not merely a story but a fact.

Our townsman and enterprising merchant Mr. Jacob Yeager has just returned from Philadelphia with a large invoice of new goods. Call and see for yourselves.

Two daily newspapers were coming to this place during the late elections, something rather rare if they did reach here only every other day.

Revival meetings are in progress at the M. E. Church in this place.

The protracted effort at the Free Will U. B. church closed Sunday evening.

Some sneak thief or thieves entered the shoe shop of Mr. William Yost here the night of the 5th inst. and stole therefrom two pairs of new boots. Also the same time Mr. William Helwig's shoe shop was robbed of two or three pairs of shoes and boots that had been left there for repairing.

On Friday last while Charles Watter son of Mr. William Watter of this place was driving down below Rupert along the Narrows' with a load of lime a truck came rattling by when the horse became frightened and ran to one side and threw him from the wagon and one wheel passing over his arm and breaking it. He was soon after taken to Catawissa where his arm was set after which he was brought home here. He is at present doing as well as may be expected under the circumstances.

Mr. S. K. Carl was married to Miss Amelia Raup by the Rev. I. R. Kramer both of Locust township. Since Sam has always been one of our lively boys but who has now deserted single blessedness,we cannot refrain from wishing him and his better half a life of sunshine and pleasantness hoping they may live happy and die rich.

The marriage of Miss Hannah Stine to Mr Francis Becker both of this place took place Thursday Oct 21st at the residence of the brides mother by the Rev. John Guldin of the M. E. church. The ceremony was performed in the presence of a number of invited friends and relatives. They were the recipients of several elegant and costly gifts from the guests. We unite with their many friends in wishing them a long life of bliss and prosperity throughout their matrimonial journey.

HEALTH AND HAPPINESS.

It seems strange that any one will suffer from the many derangements brought on by an impure condition of the blood, when SCOVIL'S BLOOD and LIVER SYRUP will restore perfect health to the physical organization. It is called a strengthening syrup, pleasant to take, and has proven itself to be the best blood purifier ever discovered, effectually curing Scrofula, all phlittic diseases, Weakness of the Kidneys, all Nervous disorders and debility. It corrects indigestion. It makes the old feel young, and the young feel gay; and will I variably drive out of the system the many ills that human flesh is heir to. A single bottle will prove to you its merits as a health restorer for it acts like a charm, especially when the complaint is of an exhaustive nature, having a tendency to lessen the natural vigor of the brain and nervous system.

HOW TO GET almost Everything.

Do you know how to get in the easiest way and to best advantage what you want for dress and house-furnishing?

First, how: Write for a catalogue; see what you can learn from it about the things you want. If samples can be useful to you, ask for them and state your wants so plainly that exactly the right samples can be sent.

Second, where: The place where goods are kept in the greatest variety; where they are sold for what they really are in respect to quality; where prices are lowest; where most care is taken to serve customers acceptably; and where you have the right to return whatever is not satisfactory.

There—no matter where you are—if you make your wants known and avail yourself of your privileges, you will get the best things in the best way, promptly and without trouble or risk; sometimes by express, almost always at less cost for carriage than the money you save in the price.

Accidents in the Household.

WHAT SHOULD BE DONE IN CERTAIN EMERGENCIES.

In the household occasional accidents occur, generally of a harmless nature, but as they sometimes are of a certain gravity, we refer to a clever little book entitled 'What to Do First,' written by C. W. Dulles, and published by Blakiston, of Philadelphia, which contains, in a small space, a great deal which is useful to know in certain emergencies. Now, as there are copper boilers attached to ranges in many kitchens, the use of oxolic acid to scour them with is quite common. Occasionally, we hear of accidents arising from carelessness, when oxalic acid has been left about. The writer of this uses oxolic acid in her kitchen, but with great precaution. The bottle containing it is never given to the cook, but only a small portion of its contents, and whenever it has been used the servant is asked 'if all of it has been employed.' If any remains over it is thrown away. It is the most stupid of drug clerks that confounds oxolic acid with epsom salts. The acid, as Dr. Dulles describes it, 'comes in small, heavy, bright-colored crystals, making a clear rattle in a bottle or jar.' In case by any accident oxolic acid has been taken, the antidote for it is lime. The chemical reason for using lime is that oxolic acid forms with it an insoluble compound, and its corrosive action on the coating of the stomach is at once stopped. 'If lime-water is at hand it may be given freely or whitewash tooth-powder, (its base is always chalk,) chalk, whiting or plaster from the wall. The latter may be crushed and stirred up in water without regard to grittiness, which will not do any harm.'

For sanitary purposes carbolic acid is now found in houses. The cases of its accidental use must be of rare occurrence, as its peculiar strong odor makes it recognizable at once. Still, cases of its having been taken in the dark are not uncommon. It is a most dangerous poison because, as Dr. Dulles states, it seems after the first painful corrosive effects to benumb the stomach.' At once large and repeated doses of oil or milk should be given. Certain cases of poisoning with carbolic acid have been successfully treated, after oil had been taken, by stimulation. But it is a dangerous acid, and care should be taken with the bottle containing it.

Corrosive sublimate is often employed about a house to rid a bed of vermin. As it is colorless when in solution it often escapes notice. 'If taken vomiting must be provoked, and some form of tannic acid given.' Tea is the strongest thing which is easy at hand, and a powerful decoction should be at once administered. Adults rarely meddle with phosphorus, but children sometimes suck this very deadly substance from matches. Very fortunately it is discovered by its odor in the child's breath, and its action is not rapid. 'Five grain doses of sulphate of copper dissolved in water may be given at intervals of 10 minutes until vomiting comes on. Then a dose of magnesia should be administered, but no oil.'

Mistakes as to quantity of opium preparations are by no means uncommon accidents. Such are to be found, most unfortunately, in what Dr. Dulles very properly calls 'the many poisonous nostrums sold as soothing syrup, pain destroyers, and drops for infants.' There is no expression harsh enough which would serve to brand the woman who administers such poison to her baby. A mother who gives such substances to her child without a doctor's advice takes the chances of life or death in her own hands. To such, capable of seeing their children waste away before their eyes, no advice would be of avail. We address, then, those who, unfortunately, may give laudanum or black drop for paregoric. The symptoms are deep sleep, with narrowing of the pupil of the eye to a small circle, which does not enlarge in the dark.' Dr. Dulles advises the immediate and persistent use of emeties, and to allow the patient to vomit over and over again.' Particular attention should be paid to the breathing. 'So long as the breathing does not fall below 10 to the minute there is no immediate danger of death; but opium is a dangerous poison, and requires all the skill that can be obtained to combat it. Formerly the custom was to walk a patient up and down, and to slap with wet towels. 'What to Do First' deprecates this, for the reason that it exhausts the patient, who, if very ill, cannot rally. If physical stimulant is to be used, lay the patient on a bed or lounge, and slap with the back of a hair-brush, or with a slipper. 'This is all the nursing necessary, so long as breathing keeps above 10 to the minute. Should it fall below this, or if the breathing should cease, artificial breathing should be employed."

It sometimes happens that a child gets through accident, an overdose of wine or brandy. We have know of a little girl made dangerously ill from having purloined brandied fruit. It was a case of stupor. The cure was made by means of 'What to Do First' advises, 'hartshorn and water, a teaspoonful of the first in a teacupful of water.' The use of tainted food, such as of decayed meat or vegetables, sometims occurs. The treatment is to excite vomiting, and to follow this with a dose of castor oil and powdered charcoal

Mothers are very careful, but the most prudent of them, in the experience of the writer of this, have sometimes made mistakes in the medicines they have given their children. One infallible rule in using any powder or fluid, no matter what it is, is never to take it up, much less to administer it, in the dark. What is the use of having labels marked 'poison' pasted on a bottle, if it be invisible in the dark? A bottle of medicine may remain in one position for weeks, untouched, but an hour before it is used somebody may have inadvertently substituted something else. If medicines were always locked up less accidents would occur. There is one word of final advice to be given: On the least suspicion of poisoning in a house, send at once for the doctor, not necessarily your own, but the very nearest at hand.

The question is often asked in case of poisoning as to the simplest way to provoke vomiting. Lukewarm water in quanity is good, but it is better to add a tablespoonful of ground mustard, or a tablespoooful of the syrup of ipecac. Further, let it be remembered that there is no occasion for fastidiousness. Any water will do. Water in which hands or dishes, for that matter, have been washed, acts more quickly than anything else and if soap is used, it will be all the better for that, as soap is an antidote for poisons. The quantity used must be large; the sufferer must be urged to drink a pint at a time, until he can contain no more, and has been made to vomit over and over again.

Advertising Cheats.

It has become so common to write the beginning of an elegant, interesting article and then run it into some advertisement that we avoid all such cheats and simply call attention to the merits of Hop Bitters in as plain honest terms as possible, to induce people to give them one trial, as no one who knows their value will use anything else.—Providence Advertiser.

Artemus Ward.

Mr. Toole, who was one of Artemus Ward's most intimate friends in London, says that he told him the following story: He went to a lecture at a remote place, where his face was not known. He was a little late; the audience became impatient, and began to stamp with their feet and to whistle. By and by Ward came out and began to move about the platform, dusting the chairs and desk. The people took him for a 'supe,' and became still more impatient. Presently he turned around, dropped the dust cloth, and said: 'Now, having dusted the chairs, I will begin my lecture.' Many of the jokes he made were not so good as this, but no doubt, served to amuse himself and others. An acquaintance told me that he was once riding in a Broadway omnibus when Browne got in, and, on being asked for his fare, inquired of the driver if he could change five dollars. The driver said he could not, stopped the conch, and requested Ward to get out. Upon this Ward became very indignant. Why should he get out? 'Because ye had not the proper fare. 'But I have,' he said; 'I never said I hadn't ten cents. 'I only asked if you could change five dollars.'—E. S. Nadal; Scribner for November.

Have You Ever

Known any per on to be seriously ill without a weak stomach or inactive liver or kidneys? And when these organs are in good condition do you not find their possessor enjoying good health? Parker's Ginger Tonic always regulates these important organs, and never fails to make the blood rich and pure and to strengthen every part of the system. It has cured hundreds of despairing invalids. Ask your neighbor about it. See other column. nov

Father Ignatius, the ritualist monk, was by last accounts more than ever convinced that the apparition seen at his monastery of St. Anthony, Wales, is the Virgin Mary. He has himself twice beheld the fair visitant, and as an illustration of the miracles wrought, Father Ignatius insists that an incurable cripple of thirty-seven years' standing has been instantly made to walk by the use of some leaves touched by the virgin.' The venerable gentleman has written letters to both the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Bishop of St. Davids, in whose diocese the monastery is, informing them of the miracle. Many pilgrims now flock to the Abbey, where an altar has been erected commemorative of the Virgin's presence.'

Two young clergymen were disputing so loudly on the subject of religion that they awoke a big dog that had been sleeping on the hearth before the fire, whereupon he began to bark furiously. An old preacher, who had been quietly sipping his tea while the disputants were talking, gave the dog a kick, exclaiming: "Hold your tongue, you silly brute! you know more about it than they do!"

To every man there are many, many dark hours when he feels inclined to abandon his best interests—hours when his dearest hopes appear delusive.

Annie Terrance, of Hickman, Ky., had closed a century of life, but still kept her place as housemaid. She recently dropped dead while washing dishes.

A man's character is like a fence—it cannot be strengthened by whitewash.

MRS. LYDIA E. PINKHAM.
OF LYNN, MASS.

DISCOVERER OF
LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND.
The Positive Cure

For all Female Complaints.

This preparation, as its name signifies, consists of Vegetable Properties that are harmless to the most delicate invalid. Upon one trial the merits of this Compound will be recognized, as relief is immediate; and when its use is continued, in ninety-nine cases in a hundred, a permanent cure is effected, as thousands will testify. On account of its proven merits, it is to-day recommended and prescribed by the best physicians in the country.

It will cure entirely the worst form of falling of the uterus, Leucorrhœa, Irregular and painful Menstruation, all Ovarian Troubles, Inflammation and Ulceration, Floodings, all Displacements and the consequent spinal weakness, and is especially adapted to the Change of Life. It will dissolve and expel tumors from the uterus in an early stage of development. The tendency to cancerous humors there is checked very speedily by its use.

In fact it has proved to be the great-est and best remedy that has ever been discovered. It permeates every portion of the system, and gives new life and vigor. It removes faintness, flatulency, destroys all craving for stimulants, and relieves weakness of the stomach.

It cures all Kidney Complaints of either sex this compound is unsurpassed.

Headache, Nervous Prostration, General Debility, Sleeplessness, Depression and Indigestion. That feeling of bearing down, causing pain, weight and backache, is always permanently cured by its use. It will at all times, and under all circumstances, act in harmony with the law that governs the female system.

For Kidney Complaints of either sex this compound is unsurpassed.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is prepared at 233 and 235 Western Avenue, Lynn, Mass. Price $1.00. Six bottles for $5.00. Sent by mail in the form of pills, also in the form of Lozenges, on receipt of price, $1.00, per box, for either. Mrs. PINKHAM freely answers all letters of inquiry. Send for pamphlet. Address as above. Mention this paper.

No family should be without LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S LIVER PILLS. They cure Constipation, Biliousness, and Torpidity of the Liver. 25 cents per box.

THE GREAT MEXICAN REMEDY.
Thousands suffering from Dyspepsia, Habitual Costiveness, Liver and Kidney Complaints, Scrofula and Kindred diseases will find with delight this new and wonderful discovery. It is a direct and positive cure for all such troubles, and a most complete conqueror and health restorer, as thousands in all parts of the United States can testify. The Great Mexican Remedy was first introduced into California in 1859, where in a few months its efficacy was established to such a degree as to create a demand for the medicine from Maine to Florida. It is the only medicine in the world compounded from the native plants, roots and herbs of Mexico. It cleanses the blood and system, and by its use every kind of blotch, pimple, or eruption, while it cures and beautifies the complexion. In diseases of the Stomach, Liver and Kidneys it has permanently cured cases of 15 and 20 years standing, after all other known remedies had failed. One dose will cure any case of Sick Headache. Two doses will break up any case of Chills and Fever. Persons suffering with Heartburn, Waterbrash, Sour Stomach, Biliousness, Costiveness, Piles, Exhaustion of the Heart, Low Spirits, and kindred affections, will find the Mexican Remedy a sure cure. Remember it is not a secret patent medicine placed before the public, under the following name:
Herbaline Bitters the Great Mexican Remedy.
Call on your druggist and get a bottle of the Mexican Remedy and convince yourself that it is the Best Medicine in the World.
